Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: The applicant's arguments received on 10/27/2006 have been carefully considered but they are not persuasive because the combined teaching of all the cited references as set forth in the previous final rejection reads on all the claims.

In this case, for example, The Applicant argues that the combination of Vook (US 5,583,866) and Omi (US 6,940,831) do not teach the claimed limitation "a transceiving unit receives a requested priority from a slave device, a controller determines a priority of the slave device considering the requested priority, the controller determines a frequency of communication according to the priority of the slave device, and a memory stores the frequency of communication of the device". However, Vook teaches master device transmits communicates to slave devices, and the slave devices transmit a priority request (the device transmits the acinowledge that will also have priority over the other devices to perform an initial transmission and the priority value assigned to a slave device may very depending upon device status that means the master device (controller) has to determine a priority of the devices and considering and transmitting for assigning the priority) to slave devices (see Fig. 7, 10 and column 15, lines 1-column 16, lines 36) and determines to transmit a frequency (selected frequency) based on transmitting priority of slave device (see Fig. 5 and column 12, lines 16-column 13, lines 18), Furthermore, Omi teaches a mester station has a scheduler for determining and scheduling the optimizing the transmission band to be assigned dynamically according to the communication type of the data (the slave stations request the priority to transmit, and mester station, scheduler, determines and schedules the communication priority (calculating a priority value for each request and selecting the communication link (communication frequency) by scheduling) for each slave station according to the request) and a state of data transmission to each slave station (see abstract, Fig. 1, 8, and column 3, lines 4 - column 4, lines 62), and also the memory in mester station stores the communication data and links of each slave station (column 8, lines 19 - column 9, lines 3, Fig. 4, 17, and column 15, lines 31 - column 16, lines 6). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the Vook as taught by Omi, provise the motivation to enhance the scheduling and controlling frequency allocation based on priority in wireless communiction system. .
